SASH in the News

SASH Gets a "Shout Out" in a Prominent Emergency Medicine Journal

A recent editorial in Annals of Emergency Medicine by UVMCC's Dr. Michael LaMantia mentions our very own SASH program as an example of a program that may benefit older adults who are sent home after an Emergency Department (ED) visit. The article notes that a recent research study found that older adults who go to the ED and are discharged home are at higher risk of functional decline, nursing home admission and death within 6 months.

SASH is mentioned as a promising model that extends the reach of the medical system into patients' homes. The recent roll out of Patient Ping which provides you timely notification about your SASH participants' ED admissions and discharges will help you support these vulnerable participants- especially important given the finding of this recent study.

APHA 1 Billion Steps Challenge

As SASH staff you already know and help participants learn that regular physical activity like walking can greatly reduce the risk of conditions such as diabetes, heart disease and cancer. We have an opportunity to make your existing walking efforts for individuals or groups at your sites part of a national health effort!

Last year we talked about some really creative indoor walking inside buildings (including scavenger hunts, rock and roll indoor walking and more). Let's get those reinvigorated and show the country how amazing SASH is. Join the SASH Team in APHA's 1 Billion Steps challenge today. Exercise is more fun when we do it together!
